PURPOSE: The purpose of this Information Memorandum is to provide information on the new discretionary grant program recently funded by Congress and to encourage eligible applicants to consider submitting grant applications when the Federal Register Notice is published later in the Spring or early Summer.

SUMMARY: Public Law 100-505, the "Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988," (the Act) was signed into law on October 18, 1988. The Act authorizes the Department to make grants to develop, implement, and operate projects to demonstrate methods of serving abandoned infants and young children, particularly drug-exposed infants and those with AIDS. Public and non-profit private agencies are eligible to apply for these grants. The purposes of the Act are to prevent the abandonment of infants and young children; to identify and address the needs of those who are, or might be, abandoned; to develop appropriate service responses for such children and their families; to recruit and train health and social services personnel, foster care families, and residential care providers to serve such children; and to develop technical assistance and training programs to support the planning, development and operation of projects and programs. Funds to carry out the purposes of this Act were appropriated for the first time in FY 1990.

The Children's Bureau in the Administration for Children, Youth and Families, Office of Human Development Services, will administer this program. The Federal Register announcement soliciting applications will not impose additional requirements beyond those in the statute and the Department's grants administration requirements. Prospective applicants should note the requirement in Section 101(b) of the Act that, if the grantee serves abandoned infants in foster homes or other nonmedical residential settings away from their parents, the grantee must meet the case plan and case review requirements specified.

The Federal Register announcement will emphasize a comprehensive approach to the design and provision of services for such children.

Finally, the Children's Bureau expects to provide technical assistance to assist grantees to implement, and operate their demonstration projects.

FUNDS

AVAILABLE:

Section 1. Short Title.

This Act may be cited as the "Abandoned Infants Assistance Act of 1988."

Sec. 2. Findings.

The Congress finds that -

(1) throughout the Nation, the number of infants and young children who have been exposed to drugs taken by their mothers during pregnancy has increased dramatically;

(2) the inability of parents who abuse drugs to provide adequate care for such infants and young children and a lack of suitable shelter homes for such infants and young children have led to the abandonment of such infants and young children in hospitals for extended periods;

(3) the vast majority of these infants and young children will be medically cleared for discharge, yet remain in hospitals as boarder babies;

(4) hospital-based child care for these infants and young children is extremely costly and deprives them of an adequate nurturing environment;

(5) training is inadequate for foster care personnel working with medically fragile infants and young children and infants and young children exposed to drugs;

(6) a particularly devastating development is the increase in the number of cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in infants and young children, and the number of such cases has doubled within the last 13 months;

(7) more than 80 percent of infants and young children with acquired immune deficiency syndrome have at least one parent who is an intravenous drug abuser;

(8) infants and young children with acquired immune deficiency syndrome are particularly difficult to place in foster homes, and are being abandoned in hospitals in increasing numbers by mothers dying of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or by parents incapable of providing adequate care;

(9) there is a need for comprehensive services for such infants and young children, including foster family care services, case management services, family support services, respite and crisis intervention services, counseling services, and group residential home services; and

- (10) there is a need for the development of funding strategies that coordinate and make the optimal use of all private resources, and Federal, State, and local resources, to establish and maintain such services.
